"Is this love? A feeling that shakes a person from head to toe?"

American author Muhyiddin Shakoor presents readers with an extraordinary novel titled Yazdan Kalan Son Gül (Last Rose of Summer).

In Cleveland, in a suburb where mostly African ancestors migrated, a boy named Carlos Jackson, who has just entered his teens, encounters a completely new emotion one summer day in 1958 when he sees Kamara, the swaet niece of his neighbor, Helen Blue.

Yet, Kamara has caught the eye of Blue Joe, the neighborhood's troublemaker. Until that day, Carlos had managed to avoid any conflicts with him. But what will he do now?

Luckily, Uncle Dan, the wise man of the neighborhood, comes to the rescue. Uncle Dan will be a guide for Carlos, showing him how extraordinary things can happen in an ordinary person's life.

And then there are the colorful, genuine, and charming characters of the neighborhood, and they are all by Carlos's side whenever he's in trouble.

Emma Aunt, with her delicious meals and emotional hymns; the helpful Mr. George, who is one of Uncle Dan's closest friends; the velvety-voiced Helen Blue; Madam Zulu with her extraordinary talents and healing mixtures; and the masters and apprentices with whom Carlos practices Capo-Kung art.

First love, separation, the transition from adolescence to adulthood, the profound philosophical foundation of martial arts, the experiences of being a marine in the Vietnam War, and even mysterious discoveries and surprises that lead to Timbuktu – all these adventures will transform Carlos into a completely different man. Perhaps he will discover the true Carlos hidden within himself.
